Toastmasters Town Meeting

ROBERT M. SWITZLER

Thomas Jefferson said "Whenever the people are well informed, they can be trusted with their own government."

The future of freedom in America depends upon the willingness of the government to keep them informed, subject, of course, to war-time restrictions of silence on our military matters.

Too many people have a comfortable assurance of safety in the old proverb, "What you don't know won't hurt you." Such a feeling has no place in a democracy. The opposite really applies, namely, "What you don't know is likely to destroy you," as was once said by a prominent editor.

In the November magazine, on page 21, a suggestion was made by the Editorial Bureau that each club give attention to two suggested problems of public interest:

First: Should the Constitution of the United States be amended so as to provide for one term of six years for President and Vice-President, neither man being eligible for election to succeed himself?

Second: Should the Constitution of the United States be amended so as to eliminate the so-called "Electoral College" and provide for election of the President and Vice-President by direct vote of the people?

Congress is criticized on the ground that it lags behind public sentiment. A recent newspaper editorial made such a charge with illustrations of the "supineness" of Congress. It claimed that the people were far ahead of Congress. This is as it should be.

Congress and other legislative bodies should wait on public opinion. Molding of public opinion is not the function of legislative bodies, either local or national. They can be the agent of popular government but never the agency for popular government.

In a democracy like ours which enjoys freedom of speech, the press, assembly and mass education, it is the newspapers, magazines, forums, pulpits, schools and colleges which combine in the task of informing and forming the mind of the public. The job of Congress and other law-making bodies is to interpret as best they can the will of the people and to embody it in legislation. In other words, we should look to Congress not for leadership but for stewardship. Toastmasters Clubs, almost 300 in 30 states and in Canada, are natural places for such activities. The type of membership and the unique plan of operation furnishes one of the most effective means of handling such an activity.

We have a privilege as well as a patriotic duty to discuss the two subjects suggested and other timely subjects as well. In doing so we are carrying out a fundamental right of the citizen as well as an invaluable service to the law-maker.

When You Read

EVERY book you read should give you something.

What that something is depends on what you are looking for and what you are capable of finding. It may be simply entertainment—relaxation. If that is what you want, and you get it, then the book has been worth your while. But there ought to be more.

You ought to get at least one worth while thought from every book you read. Of course, the more thoughtful the book, the more ideas it can give you.

You ought to get at least one quotable sentence or paragraph from every book. The author may have said an old truth in a fresh way, or he may have put his ideas into vivid, challenging words. When you find such a passage in any book, make a note of it, and keep it for reference.

You ought to get some inspiration, some impulse to better living, harder work, further study, from every book you read. The inspiration probably is there, if you look for it. Don't miss it, or you cheat yourself.

There is a challenging suggestion in the words of Bertrand Russell: "Do not read good books—life is too short for that—read only the best. And of those, only read what gives you the greatest pleasure. All the best books contain boring passages. A novel which sparkles from the first page to the last is pretty sure not to be a great book."

So read what interests you, but read with a purpose to get something out of your reading. Keep a notebook beside you while you read and make notes of the things you find worth remembering. If you lay down any book without having noted something in it to be remembered, you may be sure that you have been wasting your time.

Standard Timing

HARRY W. MATTISON, Past President of Toastmasters International

TIMING of speeches and of entire meeting procedures is fundamental in Toastmasters work. In a well-run club there can be no careless running-over of time, either by speakers or by other participants in the activities. The meeting starts on time, and ends promptly at a pre-determined time.

Our Committee on Timing Procedure has made a careful investigation into the timing practices of Toastmasters Clubs in general, and our survey indicates a definite interest in, and a demand for, a uniform system of standardized technique for timing speeches. It also reveals certain important facts, as follows:

1. Of the comparatively few clubs which have adopted timing regulations of any kind, almost none enforces these regulations invariably;
2. Probably no two clubs use identical timing regulations;
3. No non-disturbing signaling device has yet been found, nor one giving universal satisfaction in other respects.

Further than this, there exists a disparity in the timing practices of the various clubs, to such an extent that one attending a club other than his own needs someone to interpret the signals and other timing conditions.

While it is not recommended that all clubs must slavishly follow some arbitrarily established plan, it must be clear that some standards should be set up and that every club should be advised to adopt and follow these standards to the fullest possible extent. It ought to be possible for a Toastmaster to visit any club and find in it methods and means of timing which will be familiar to him.

Attention is now being directed by the Committee to the possibilities embraced in simple, direct methods currently employed by the broadcasting companies, namely:

1. Stop watch timing.
2. Animate signals.

In addition, there is the question of spacing of signals given to the speaker so as to standardize our method of giving warning that the time is running short. There must be one best way for doing this. We should agree on this, and then use it.

Individual Toastmasters are invited to send their ideas on the subject as well as their questions to Harry W. Mattison, Minneapolis 11, Minnesota, for the benefit of the Committee in its further studies.

We always have time enough, if we will but use it aright.
—Goethe.

Adam's Apple and Voice Quality

DR. RAY M. RUSSELL, of Beverly Hills Toastmasters Club

Scientists, philologists, philosophers and anatomists have puzzled for centuries over the origin or derivation of this name, "Adam's Apple," for the larynx or voice-box. One wise philosopher has said that the expression may have originated with Eve, in the Garden of Eden.

When she gave Adam the apple to eat, she observed his throat as he swallowed it, and saw the larynx moving up and down. She thought that the apple had lodged in his throat and made the bulge there. Adam must have been a very thin man, with a huge voice-box, to have given Eve this impression.

Here could be a "Believe it or not" for Ripley, for within this box are the vocal cords, which are not "cords" at all, but flat bands, like rubber bands, which they resemble in color and elasticity. These bands are located so that they make a "V", horizontally placed, with the apex forward.

There is no tissue in the human body more alive than these vocal bands, nor is there any which more quickly obeys a command, or can take more punishment. They have been likened to violin strings, to a trombone, a flute, an organ pipe, and even to a harpsichord—and that probably is where the name "cords" originated. But the strings of the harpsichord are round, while the vocal cords are flat, which rather spoils the comparison.

Have you ever seen the vocal bands? Probably not. I have! And never have I been so thrilled as when I first viewed them in motion, when the patient said, "Ah," and then later on, when the singer sounded a note. The glistening, self-lubricated vocal organ gives you the impression of a specialized structure so well developed that it possesses personality and intelligence.

No scientist thus far has been able to tell us whether the vocal bands vibrate "in phase" or out of phase, that is, whether they vibrate together or alternately. Of one thing we may be certain, that the Adam's Apple or larynx, with the enclosed vocal cords, is the generator of sound.

The breath sets the vocal bands vibrating, and thus is started a chain of sound waves. These are amplified in the vestibules, the small resonating chambers between the true and the false vocal bands, and our vocal sounds result.

Many speech and voice teachers think of the head cavities, the oro-pharynx and the naso-pharynx, as resonators. But how can such wet, water-logged, soft-walled cavities produce resonance? The fact is that the structures above the larynx are modulators, or modifiers of sound.

In the study of sound, the physicist is interested in (1) Pitch, or frequency of vibrations; (2) Intensity, or loudness, which represents the energy required to propel a chain of waves; (3) Duration, or the time required for the waves so propelled to die down or die out; and (4) Timbre, or quality.

Here we must pause to consider the fact that voice qualities are so vitally important that they may represent the difference between success and failure in life. Quality, as defined by the physicist, is a fusion of various pitches. You may demonstrate by striking a chord on the piano, representing the "pillars" of the scale—the one, three, five and eight of the octave. These notes, struck together, are conceived as a single tone; but the striking of these notes sets up vibrations in the same family of notes both above and below the octave struck, giving us "overtones." It is the overtones which give to the singing or speaking voice and to instruments as played by the artist that quality which the French call nuances, which is really a careful blending of the overtones.

Pitch in the human voice is a mental evaluation of ear perception, and the mental control of vocal chord intensity, to produce and maintain a chain of waves of equal amplitude, sustained by the breath.

Intensity or loudness and duration of tone is a breath problem, the same as the sustaining of the pitch, and all these depend upon how the column of air from the lungs is supplied to the vocal bands.

Voice quality, or timbre, is a subtle mixing or blending of voice overtones, or a lack of overtones, depending on how well you use your modulators above and below the vocal bands, but the problem of good voice quality depends also upon the texture of the vocal bands themselves, as well as on the control of the vocal cord function by the muscles of the larynx, which must be unstricted and free to vibrate.

There is a still more subtle psychological aspect in voice quality—the brain concept of beauty, coloring, creation of mental pictures, which include all the emotions, such as fear, love, hate, jealousy, and all of which are involved in producing different intensities or degrees of loudness. Fundamentally, the quality of the voice is affected by the mental attitude.

Physiological fatigue is a disturbing influence on voice. Fatigue, whether physical or mental, affects the tension of all the muscles, including the muscles of the larynx, and even the vocal cords themselves, sufficiently to impair tone quality. Therefore it is important to relax and rest the muscles for best voice effects.

Some musicians hold that voice quality is wholly a matter of the structure and texture of the vibrating instrument, but this is an error. A Stradivarius violin is a better medium for tone production than a common fiddle, but a great artist can produce finer tones on a cheap instrument than a novice can bring from the Stradivarius. It is only when the artist plays the master's violin that perfect music is brought forth.

There would be little need for teachers of voice if we had to conclude that voice quality is dependent alone on the structure of the "voice box." While this is an important feature, there are many other important ones, and it is for this reason that the training of the controllable parts of the voice mechanism is so essential.

The principal objectionable quality in the American voice is the nasal quality. Then we have the high-pitched, screeching, metallic, pinched tight, constricted voice of the female, as compared with the woman's voice which is low-pitched, harsh, rasping, almost guttural. These objectionable qualities are the result of ignorance, carelessness or laziness, and they can be removed by proper training and practice.

The voices we like to hear are those which are mild, soft, full, smooth, harmonious, flexible and melodious. There are the resonant, clear, ringing tones, full of life and power. And the speaking voice can have such qualities just as well as the singing voice.

Study your own voice quality, and seek to improve it. Remember that the Adam's Apple represents the generating point of vocal sound, and that the other equipment in your voice apparatus is capable of changing your voice quality for better or for worse. Use it to produce the changes for betterment, and you will find that your voice, well used, will help you mightily as you seek to "make friends and influence people."

Sincerity—The Secret of Success

H. B. ROBERTSON, Editor, The Illinois Central Magazine
From a talk before the Central Toastmasters Club of Chicago

IT must be fully thirty-five years ago that I first heard Senator Husting speak. I was a reporter for the Minneapolis Journal and had just been assigned to the capitol run in St. Paul. Part of my daily grist of news was the doings of the legislature. Husting was a member of the Minnesota state legislature.

When Husting started to speak, my first impulse was to laugh. He was an ungainly figure—a big bulk of a body on long spindly legs. His face was beardless, like that of a boy. His voice was a squeaky treble. His gestures and his pose were awkward.

Before Senator Husting reached the end of his first paragraph, however, his hearers forgot his physical and vocal handicaps. From then on, they hung on his words. I have always remembered Husting as the most effective speaker I have ever heard.

A few years later, Minnesota sent Husting to Washington, where he soon became the master orator of Congress. Although he was not of his political party, President Woodrow Wilson persuaded Husting to organize the "War Congress." It was Husting who worked Congress into a cooperating unit in the support of the first World War—and he did it with a squeaky voice and awkward gestures.

In the several times I heard Senator Husting speak, I think I discovered the secret of his oratorical success. It was his sincerity. No one could hear him without being convinced of his burning sincerity. His audience felt that he believed to the depths of his soul every word he uttered. He took painstaking care to say exactly what he meant. He avoided the slightest exaggeration. Neither did he make understatements for effect. He never was suspected of a misstatement.

When Senator Husting spoke, the attention of his audience never wavered. His hearers were eager to hear the message he was eager to deliver. He spoke with a whole heart and his words carried conviction.

Senator Husting taught me to believe that the effectiveness of either speech or writing is measured by the sincerity of the speaker or writer. The speaker or writer must believe it himself before he can make his audience believe it.

Always Sincerity

A false man found a religion? Why, a false man cannot build a brick house! No Mirabeau, Napoleon, Burns, Cromwell, no man adequate to do anything, but is first of all in right earnest about it. Sincerity is the great characteristic of all men in any way heroic.

—Thomas Carlyle—On Heroes and Hero-Worship.

"WITH A SOUTHERN ACCENT"

THE HENRY W. GRADY TOASTMASTERS CLUB IS CHARTERED

The Georgia Power Company can muster almost a quorum of members of this new chapter in Atlanta, which has adopted the name of that famous orator, Henry W. Grady, as its title. But while many of the members are from the Power Company, the other local firms and industries are well represented, making up a membership which presents a cross section of Atlanta's business community, and which promises great work in speech.

The charter was presented on December 13th, with Captain N. C. Laffer, formerly of Tucson Toastmasters, making the presentation. The gavel presentation was by N. E. Smith, President of Atlanta Toastmasters.

The Henry W. Grady Toastmasters Club is our second chapter in Atlanta. A third is in prospect. Meantime, Jerry Larson, formerly of Minneapolis and Sioux Falls, assures us that the work is just getting started in the great state of which he is trying to become a native son, and that we shall soon have enough clubs in Georgia to constitute a strong district.

Our Changing Language

RALPH C. SMEDLEY

OUR language is constantly in a state of change. Words fluctuate in meaning. Usages which were unacceptable become standard practice. Words which were in good taste degenerate. Pronunciations change. New words are introduced, and old ones become obsolete.

The dictionary makers have to put out a new and revised edition every two or three years to keep up with the changes, and the careful word user must carry on a ceaseless study of the new dictionaries if he will hold his place as a user of correct speech. But this fact need not cause us distress.

Change is an element of life, and so long as a language is living and in use change is inevitable. People just can't leave the language alone.

Latin, for us, is a "dead language"—not dead and buried, but dead in the sense that it is completed, finished, no longer subject to change. That is why it can be made the language of science and philosophy. It stays fixed in its forms and implications, and so it can be made to express exact and stable meanings.

In the days when Latin was the daily speech of a great people, it was just as filled with changes and shifts in forms and meanings as our own language is today. Thus, we find Quintilian, writing nearly two thousand years ago, crying out against errors in the Latin which are strangely suggestive of the strictures of present-day advocates of correct speech.

The every-day man in the street was quite as slangy and careless in his use of the classic language as we are now in our common talk. Only when it ceased to be a popularly spoken tongue did its forms become crystallized and set in permanent molds. Because it is a "dead language" it is no longer subject to growth and change.

Much as we may disapprove of the careless speech of the common American, we must not forget to be glad that our language is still capable of change. Its growth is a constant reminder of its life and virility. The addition of new words and the changing meanings given to old words are evidence of our own intellectual progress.

This principle of change adds to the difficulty of the careful speaker. It is very difficult to hit on word uses which can be cited as inflexible, not subject to change, absolutely right. Every rule may have its exception, and about the time you think you have a word nailed down where it cannot possibly wriggle loose, you find that someone has released it to some new, different, and even technically illegal use. We can't keep the language from changing. Our best course is to adapt our own speech to fit the changes.

A Letter We Liked

(This letter was written by John D. Harms, President of the "Chief" Seattle Toastmasters. It carries suggestions which should interest and help every other club.)

On behalf of our Club, the "Chief" Seattle Toastmasters (formerly Seattle Toastmasters No. Two) I wish to send a word of appreciation to Headquarters for the continued excellence of the work being done there. We have found all the publications which we have received to be very helpful—and we intend to take full advantage of all the materials thus offered. The work done at the Home Office gives to Toastmasters a fund of information and helpful pointers such as no other organization possesses. Because of the efforts put forth, the individual Toastmasters Clubs are all knit together in one unified whole—all going in the same direction.

Our club has been existence for more than twelve years. It is a tribute both to the club and to Toastmasters in general, that some of the original members are still as actively interested now as they were at the start.

During these years, the club has had its high points and its low ones. Perhaps the lowest was a little more than a year ago, when it was feared that we might have to disband until after the war. But we decided to go on, and the result is that we are now at a peak, as interest has never been higher, attendance better, or meetings more thoroughly enjoyable.

We are grateful for the hard work by our committees and our officers, and for the good material from the Home Office, all of which combined to enable us to make our "comeback" within the space of one year.

Probably no other factor has done more to increase interest than our carefully planned program variation. To illustrate what we have done, I list a few:

Old-Timer's Night—to which we invited as many of the founders and former members of the club as could be located. It was a great reunion.

Microphone Night—when a public address system was used to give the members good experience in this style of speaking.

Politics Night—in which our speakers debated local issues, just before the November election. It was stimulating and informative.

Joint Meeting—honoring President Bob Switzler, the Y.M.C.A. Toastmasters Club joined with us in welcoming our President, who gave us all a "shot in the arm" in his great speech.

Guests and Exchange Speakers—frequently used to add interest. It gives our own members valuable experience in serving as "exchange" speakers before other clubs, and brings new voices to us.

Other Factors

There are still other factors which have contributed to growth and interest in our club. Some of these are:

1. The silver trophy cup, presented by one of our members, which is awarded each week by its holder to the man who gave him the most pleasure at the preceding meeting. The donor specified that the cup need not be given alone for meritorious performance, but might even be presented if a member gave the holder pleasure by being absent at the previous meeting. The presentation never fails to give us a lift.

2. The Topicmasters strive to outdo each other in making their part of the meeting novel and interesting. No ruts nor routines are allowed to interfere.

3. The Club Bulletin, published weekly, has proved valuable not only as a reminder to members, but as a means by which the President can push his own ideas, and those of others.

4. New members, the life-blood of any organization, have been coming in until we have now reached our goal of 30 active members. And still more want to get in.

5. We have participated fully in the Inter-Club Speech Contests, and in the War Bond Drives, of course.

In the Sixth War Loan Drive, we sponsored the Victory Bond Wagon on December 13th, setting a record of $40,000 in sales during the two and one-half hours we had charge. The "Bond Wagon" consists of a large army truck and trailer, with a platform and a public address system.

So we're all mighty proud of our club, and we're certainly sold on Toastmasters. Until now we have been content to improve our club, but now we want to let everybody know just what a good club we have. Maybe our example will help some others on the upward way.

LAUGHTER IS GOOD FOR YOU

"What," asked Professor George Saintsbury, a great scholar and a great humanist, a little while ago, "would the world do without laughter?"

What indeed! Laughter is the Grand Panacea, the Great Spiritual Antiseptic, but it must be the real thing—the genuine article . . . The really beneficent laughter must be no spiteful cachinnation; it must be innocent of malice; it must be born of a good heart and a contented stomach.

It must be of the kind that does good to those who laugh, and no harm to those who are laughed at.—J. Lewis May.

It is a good thing to laugh, at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness. Beasts can weep when they suffer, but they cannot laugh.—Dryden.

Sharp Sayings

Speaking of speech, here are some wisecracks that may fit into your speeches:

Society pays for its sins. Once it made Willie speak pieces at school on Friday afternoon, and now it has to listen to his after-dinner speeches When all is said and done, too many people keep on saying and doing Public speaking is the art of diluting a two-minute idea with a two-hour vocabulary One advantage the average soapbox orator enjoys is that he is unhampered by any knowledge of his subject In politics, the paths of glory lead to the gravy If you can't win, make the one ahead break the record Some people don't believe in new thought. They just use the old ones over again In the subway we run into a good many people who seem to be able to think on our feet But if an infant can't think, why does it yell the moment it sees the kind of world it is in? Don't worry about what people are thinking about you, for they are not thinking about you at all, but are wondering what you are thinking about them.

We always like to have a man come right out and say what he thinks—when he agrees with us.

A minute lost at a railroad crossing may save all the rest of your time Statistics, as it is well known, may be made to prove anything—even the truth He is a wise man who knows what not to say—provided he doesn't say it.

The batch of jokes I sent to the editors were rejected as no good, but when I threw them in the stove, the fire just roared When telling a joke, always make it as short as possible because if you stretch it out you give the listener time to think of one to tell you You can say one good thing for money—it talks only when it is leaving The surest sign that you have no brains is to argue with someone who hasn't.

Churches, where souls are lifted, stay vacant; but beauty parlors, where faces are lifted, are crowded The summit of optimism is the man, wholly bald, who orders a bottle of hair restorer, and says to the drug clerk: "Send along a comb and brush with it."

When Gladstone had finished a long speech in which he attacked the policies of Disraeli, the latter rose and said: "The man needs no reply. He is inebriated by the exuberance of his own verbosity." The hard part of making good is that you must keep on doing it over again every day The doctor who recommends pleasant thoughts while eating should edit the food prices.

Americans have more time-saving devices and less time than any other people in the world.

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY" TO WINNIPEG

While Toastmasters International observed its 20th birthday last October, Winnipeg Toastmasters celebrated completion of their first year by holding a very special birthday dinner. The birthday cake was mounted with 20 small candles, and one large candle in the center, representing the ages of the club and of the International, respectively. It has been a great year for the members of this club, one of the inspiring events being the development of a new chapter at Brandon, Manitoba, which is just being chartered.

God wove a web of loveliness,
Of clouds and stars and birds,
But made not anything at all
So beautiful as words.

—Branch.

The Educational Committee at Work

The Educational Bureau of Toastmasters International offers certain suggestions and warnings to all the Clubs, as they seek to improve their technique as educators. Great satisfaction is felt because of the progress which has been made in a little more than a year of systematic effort. Most of the Clubs are working on definitely planned programs for educational advancement. The results are being seen in increased demand for the publications of the Educational Bureau and in improved work by the members. But there are many details in which constant attention is the price of progress.

Put Education on the Program

The Educational Committee Chairman should confer regularly with the Program Chairman, to make sure that at least once each month the Educational Committee has a chance to inform the members of the Club on materials and methods. The Educational Committee must work out a comprehensive plan to aid the members in self-improvement. One of the best ways is to present at regular intervals one of the pamphlets of "folders" which the Educational Bureau offers. Take one of these for study and discussion for 20 or 30 minutes of a meeting once a month, and you will find surprising results. Even a simple explanation of the educational materials and the plans of the committee will be a revelation to some members.

Don't Change Too Often

Some of the Clubs have a bad habit of changing the Educational Committee every three or four months. Don't do it, please, if it can be avoided. Get a good Educational Committee, with a good man as chairman, and keep them on the job for a year, or for six-months, at the very least. Theirs is a work which takes long-range planning.

Use Parliamentary Scripts

The series of Parliamentary Scripts for practice in the Club is one of our best offerings of the year. Many Clubs are using them systematically. Every Club should do so. They are the best method for training in parliamentary procedure which we have yet devised. Fifteen minutes at one meeting each month devoted to Parliamentary training is a minimum. It will give results.

Here Are the Materials

The following educational bulletins are available. They are furnished free to each Club on request. Please do not order more than two titles at one time. Use these, and then ask for more:

1. How You Can Make a Good Speech.
2. Hands Up! How to Use Gestures.
3. Voice Gestures.
4. Can You Take It?
5. Complete Speech Training in the Club Program. (Newly published.)
6. The Speaking Voice.

8. A Speaker is Like a Host.

MEMORIES

By Henry Milbrath, of the Toastmasters Club of Princeton, Minnesota. This poem was presented at the Fifth Anniversary of the Princeton Toastmasters on December 7, 1944, dedicated by the author to Toastmasters International.

Oh yes, let us cherish our memories
As the years go fleeting past,
For they, like pillars of granite
Are the things in life that last.
I'll ever remember my critics
And the words of reproof and of praise
The warmth of the smile and the handclasp
Will live in my heart always.

I care not for baubles of riches
For they closely hedge in the souls
And the hands that grasp should be reaching
For more of life's shining goals.
But like on a clear, crisp morning,
I'd await your gay halloo,
For a richness lives in its cadence
And deep in the heart of you.

And so I would hail Toastmasters,
And its memories safe enshrine
When oft I met and talked and laughed
With these comrades strong and fine.
And there is one undying memory
As we our efforts and talents ally
To lift this star of victory higher
With the help of the T. M. I.

IT IS TIME TO SPEAK OUT

Now is the time for every good man to speak out, to help build a better world than the sad one in which we live today. Perhaps you modestly disclaim ability, or underrate the value of your ideas. Don't do it.

Someone—perhaps many someones—will have to bring out ideas, suggestions, plans for world reorganization. No one mind can meet and solve all the problems. You may have an idea. You may have a thought which will help. Speak it out.

Too many of us incline to discount our own thoughts. Even when we do hit on something good, we are too modest, or too timid, to tell about it. We find it difficult to assert ourselves. It is part of the world's tragedy that so many of the good people have gone quietly about their business while a few noisy ones, loud speakers, self-seekers have trumpeted their own evil ideas, challenged all that was good, and thrown all mankind into turmoil. The present conflict comes largely from the shouting of certain fanatical dreamers afflicted with the "screaming heebie-jeebies" who have tried to become powerful.

Let the common folks, the average people, the good little people become vocal, with ideas to build a new world. You, as a Toastmaster, have some ability in speech. Think, study, then speak your mind. Cease to be a "yes" man. Take your place in your own circle as a leader of thought. Help counteract evil teachings which threaten life and liberty by bringing forth your best ideas.

You cannot afford to sit back in obscurity if you have something to offer. It is your liberty, your happiness, your nation, your world, that are threatened. Stand up and be counted on the right side, but do more than that. Stand up and be heard as you speak for the right. This year, 1945, may be a year of great decisions. You may help to decide. It is time to speak out.

FEBRUARY 12 "First in peace, first in war"—let these two names
FEBRUARY 22 be first in Club programs for February. Study the philosophy and political principles of each of these great Americans, and apply their ideals to the problems of the present day. Is it too much to ask that every Toastmasters Club devote at least one meeting during February to this theme?

OUR PURPOSE FOR 1945 The most important task for 1945 is to finish the war with a victory which will let the world return to normal pursuits with some hope of lasting peace. For this year, every American must test his activities and undertakings by one question: "Will this thing I am about to do help win the war?" This includes the Toastmasters Club.

Already we have made substantial contributions to the war effort; but now we must do more. We have three great services to offer. First, we provide a reservoir of trained speakers, ready to inform the public on all matters for the general welfare. Second, in our meetings, our members have an opportunity to study and discuss vital problems, informing themselves and shaping their own thoughts so that they may the more intelligently inform and influence others. Third, in our speeches, discussions and fellowship in the clubs we find mental recreation to build our own morale and to fit us for greater production in our individual tasks.

These three services alone are sufficient to justify our efforts to keep the Toastmasters movement really moving. During the past years of war we have worked hard, both to build our clubs and to make our service count. In the year before us we may well concentrate on these two objectives, in so far as they aid the war effort. If organization of new clubs is a help, as it is in many cases, these clubs must be established. If increase of membership helps, as it usually does, let's increase. We know that our service as speakers in War Bond Drives, Red Cross and other campaigns is needed. Let's do more and better at it.

This year—the Victory Year, as we hope and pray—our work for the war's finish must be intensified. This year is the year, not to build a greater Toastmasters movement, but to make the world a place in which Toastmasters may continue to operate freely. Our growth and our possible greatness will come as we deserve them through our service.

WE SERVE A letter from the Los Angeles Branch of the United States Treasury to I. A. McAninch, Chairman of our Committee on Community Activities, reads in part: "The Treasury Department wishes to express its deep appreciation for the splendid cooperation you have given us throughout the Sixth War Loan Drive. May we also extend our thanks to the members of the Toastmasters International for their willingness to help and the excellent performances they gave."

CAN YOU TOP THIS?

Absent Past Presidents: William Bryce, Dick Williamson, James Tucker. The two last named are in military service.

The Progressive Toastmasters Club of Huntington Park, California, takes pride in the permanence of its membership. Of the 20 men who have served this club as President, 15 are active members. Two of the others are in military service. Six of the charter members are still active in the club. These are, William Bryce, M. H. Hayward, Charles G. Hedgcock, Gordon R. Howard, Paul F. Mekeal, George D. Wells.

The club enjoys a full membership, made up of men of highest type of ability and interests. Attendance is always near the "thirty" mark. Program variety is a magnet which draws the members and many visitors.

It is often very convenient, when you want a thing said, to enclose the matter in quotation marks. It relieves one from the responsibility of standing sponsor for it if the hypothesis does not prove popular.

—Elbert Hubbard.

Be Careful With Quotations

(From "Southern Accent," published by the Atlanta Toastmasters Club. James Fling, Editor.)

There is a special value in quotations which no speaker can afford to ignore. It has its basis in human psychology. People are impressed by what famous men have said. The attribute profundity to a great man's words, which, if spoken by any other, might be considered quite ordinary.

That speaker is foolish who does not avail himself of the opportunity for emphasis and persuasion thus offered him. But he must be careful in his use of quotations. If the orator quotes Napoleon, who said, "When I want a difficult thing done, I select a man with a long nose," the audience will hover over the thought and then light on it reflectively. But if the orator offered this as his own thought, the audience's estimate of his intelligence might take a nose-dive. Napoleon's reputation is a bulwark for his observations which the ordinary man cannot supply.

A quotation aids the speaker even if it depends on the position rather than on the brilliance of its author. Report that the Shah of Persia says he never attends horse races, "because anyone knows that one horse will run faster than another, and I don't care which one it is," or, "No horse goes as fast as the money you put on him," and the words derive humor from the naivete of a foreigner's viewpoint. But if the speaker makes such a statement on his own initiative, he is more likely to hear a snort than a real laugh from his hearers.

Tie your quotation to a well known name, and then quote correctly and in the right place, and you will gain a reputation for brilliance and wide reading, as well as for effective speaking. But be very sure you are right before you quote.

Something New

The Santa Cruz Toastmasters Club desired to offer a course of instruction to members, new and old. "Speechcraft" seemed a bit too heavy for the purpose. They decided to try "Basic Training" as the basis for their course, and they report a great success with it. For 12 evenings the club devoted a portion of its program time to the study of "Basic Training," taking up one of the speech forms each evening. Excellent results were obtained.

The Educational Bureau will take the matter under consideration with the hope that some new technique may be worked out and offered to all the clubs in connection with their use of "Basic Training."

Problems For Programs

IN this year of great problems and greater decisions, there can be no shortage of program material. Rather, the problem is how to find time for proper discussion of all the questions which press upon us.

In the November Toastmaster Magazine there was a call for all the clubs to study the questions of amending the Constitution so as to limit the term of service for President and Vice-President, and of eliminating the "Electoral College" from our voting machinery.

Now come other urgent questions.

What Do We Want?

Shall we provide for universal military training and conscription, and how shall it be done?

Do we want some sort of health insurance, or socialized medicine?

What sort of world organization, league of nations, world court, or other international plan must be set up to insure world safety?

These are three more urgent problems which vitally concern every one of us, and on which there is today no end of muddled thinking and double-talking.

Progress is Made

Some of our clubs are at work already on these discussions. The Wichita Toastmasters Club has been discussing the conscription of wealth and industry for the war effort, in addition to manpower. In a communication from this Club there is an urgent appeal for all our chapters to study the problem in order to arouse a deeper feeling on this step toward successful prosecution of the war, and uplift of the unity of national morale. The Wichita Toastmasters have adopted resolutions favoring universal mobilization, that the war may be ended the sooner.

At Greensburg, the Toastmasters gave careful study to compulsory military training, and communicated their findings to their representatives in Congress.

Other Toastmasters Clubs are swinging into line, first to study these vital subjects, and then to make known their convictions. A communication from a Toastmasters Club, such as the one sent by Greensburg, embodying points discussed and the attitudes of the members, will get careful attention from any Senator or Representative at Washington, or at your State Capital.

Plan Programs

Don't let your club speakers waste too much time on unimportant matters. Give them a chance to think and speak on themes of deepest personal interest and of national and international significance.

Principles of a Democratic Election

GRANT HENDERSON, Parliamentarian

The fundamental laws of an organized society provide for certain offices, designate the titles of the officers, and prescribe the duties of each officer. The same laws usually prescribe who, of the society's membership, are eligible to hold office, when and how elections shall be held, and the terms of the officers-elect.

If an election of officers is to be truly democratic the rules and regulations governing procedure must be based upon democratic principles which may be summarized as follows:

1. All officers to be elected must be designated.
2. Terms of officers-elect must be definitely prescribed.
3. Time and place of the election must be made known to the electorate.
4. Prior nominations of candidates are not necessary (unless otherwise prescribed by the rules of the organization.)

5. Each elector has the right to vote for any one who is eligible to be chosen, regardless of nominations.
6. No one can be eligible for election to more than one office.
7. Election shall be by secret ballot.

8. A majority of all votes cast is necessary for election.

9. Every officer-elect takes his office immediately upon election (unless otherwise specified in the laws of the organization).

These principles should be borne in mind in every Toastmasters Club as the time approaches for club elections in March. Next month we shall give details concerning elections in the Toastmasters Club, as prescribed in the Standard Constitution and By-Laws.

Adaptation

Two dusky small boys were quarreling. One poured forth a volume of vituperous epithets, while the other leaned against a tree and calmly listened. When the flow of language was exhausted, he said:

"Is you all through?"

"Yes," said the other.

"You ain't got nuffin' more to say?"

"No."

"Well, all them things you called me—them's you!"

The Retort Caustic

Disraeli was one day approached for advice by a newly elected Member of Parliament, who asked:

"As a new member, do you think I should take part in debate?"

"Certainly not," said Disraeli.

"It is far better that the House should wonder why you do not speak than to wonder why you do."

It was on December 11 that Charter Number 288 was formally presented to the Toastmasters Club of Portland, Maine. The Club was honored by the presence of Governor Hildreth, himself an able speaker, who made the presentation of the Charter in impressive manner. The Club's officers were installed by Francis P. Freeman, President of the Portland Y.M.C.A. and the gavel presentation was by George A. Harrison, Chairman of the City Council of Portland. Because of the distance and the difficulty of travel in these days, it was impossible for any officer of Toastmasters International to be present, so the official presentations were made by these distinguished men of Maine.

"As goes Maine, so goes the nation" is a familiar political slogan. Perhaps it is not unreasonable to hope that this rule may hold for Toastmasters. Portland is our first Club in the New England states. The new club is a livewire organization, fully awake to its opportunity, and there is reason to anticipate that the movement will spread from this first group.

Tilden Harrison, Associate General Secretary of the Portland Y.M.C.A., has been the active promoter of the new chapter, and he is to be congratulated on the success which crowns his endeavors.

Let's Tell a Story

The following more or less funny stories, each useful on proper occasion in a speech, have been carefully selected for age. The Editors guarantee that no story printed on this page is less than 40 years old. Most of them are considerably older. Because of their age, some of them are less well known, and may even pass for new ones when used with modern audiences.

Alibi

Mother: "Now, Willie, you know I told you not to go in swimming, and yet you have been in the water."

Willie: "I know it, Ma, but Satan tempted me."

Mother: "Why didn't you tell Satan to get behind you?"

Willie: "I did, and he pushed me in."

Honeymooners

Mr. Newlywed found his wife in tears when he came home to dinner. "What is the trouble, darling?" he inquired.

"Oh, I made such a lovely cake for your dinner, and set it out to cool, and Fido ate it."

"Well, that's too bad, but don't cry. I know a man that will give us another dog."

Reggie Loves Daddy

"Now, Reggie," said his mother, "wouldn't you like to give your pretty white rabbit to that poor little boy who has no father?"

"Couldn't we give him father instead?" asked Reggie.

Here's An Old-Timer

The president of a small college was revisiting his boyhood home village. He was asked to make a speech. In order to convince them that his academic honors had not caused him to put on airs, he began thus: "My dear friends — I won't call you 'ladies and gentlemen'—I know you too well for that."

Unreasonable

Willie was playing with his little brother.

"Ma," he called out, "I wish you'd make Bobby behave himself. Every time I hit him on the head with the hammer he hollers."

Do You Get the Point?

A tramp stopped in front of a second-hand store where there was a pile of suitcases displayed for sale. They were piled up in pyramid fashion, with a big one at the bottom, and gradually diminishing sizes above. The little bag at the top of the pile was marked: "This size for fifty cents."

The tramp regarded it earnestly, and then remarked: "And so do I." (If this is too deep for your sense of humor, write to the Editor for a diagram.)

Compensation

A kindly old gentleman spoke to a small boy who was carrying a heavy load of newspapers:

"Sonny," said he, "don't all those papers make you tired?"

"No, boss," said the boy, "I can't read."

COUNSEL FOR CRITICS

The habit of listening critically to the best speakers must be maintained. The extemporizer can never safely allow himself to listen without noting the words of the speaker, except when his emotions are profoundly stirred. A critical spirit during worship is a foe to devotion, and, in its last analysis, is irreverent. The hearer who does not prefer an increase of the spirit of devotion to an elegant style, which contributes nothing to the depth of religious feeling, is not in a worshipful frame. Neither would one pause, when a Patrick Henry speaks, to consider whether each sentence is constructed in harmony with the technical rules of rhetoric.

But in general the critical spirit must be preserved. He who, without perceiving the error, listens to one who speaks ungrammatically, is certain himself to speak incorrectly. Eternal vigilance is the price of correct use of language.

—James M. Buckley, LL. D.

Words can sting. They resound like smacks; and would you begin by smacking children? Persuade children to love and trust you, and then you can smack them—justly and with impunity.

—Warwick Deeping, in "The Cleric's Secret"
