TOASTMASTERS INTERNATIONAL is a non-profit, non-partisan, non-sectarian, educational organization of Toastmasters clubs throughout the free world.

The Toastmasters programs provide opportunities to develop skill in listening, thinking, and speaking, and in leadership by participating in a series of oral communications projects with constructive evaluation, leadership experiences, and community programs. These and many other opportunities to develop executive potential are presented in the fellowship of an organized group of men — the Toastmasters club.

Each club is a member of Toastmasters International. The club and its members receive services, supplies, and continuing guidance from the World Headquarters, Santa Ana, California 92711.

Not Us, We're TOASTMASTERS

If "ignorance is bliss," Toastmasters must be among the most miserable people in the world. Neither are we ignorant nor are we lazy. We work for the development of our intelligence and our abilities.

The preparation of a speech is no easy task, nor should it be taken lightly. Our standard of excellence is high automatically because our fellow Toastmasters demand it.

The great embarrassment felt by inexperienced Toastmasters speaking before a group is an outgrowth of insecurity. But the source of this insecurity is not their appearance before the group or the sound of their voice.

The source of this insecurity is rooted in the topic the speaker is discussing; the source of insecurity is based on the possibility that the content of his speech subject might embarrass him.

Should we not discuss topics that could embarrass us? This question has no base. It is not relevant to the Toastmasters standard of excellence. There are no topics that can embarrass us if we put enough time and effort into the development and preparation of the content of our speech.

Your content is the core of the communication and leadership program. This is why Toastmasters truly are miserable individuals, and I think we all agree that the more miserable, the better for us.

The rule is the same for inexperienced Toastmasters as well as for ATM's and DTM's. Don't allow your topic to embarrass you. The Toastmasters ideal is the foundation for the development of your communication and leadership abilities.

WORDS AND THEIR USE

Antennae or antennas? Technically, the Latin plural of antenna is antennae, but this usually is too technical for general use. When talking about more than one antenna, you likely will say, antennas.

You and Your Club

PARLIAMENTARY PRACTICE

Business is transacted in a deliberative assembly by following eight steps of correct parliamentary procedure. These steps are listed below. Place them in their proper order.

1. The Chair states the motion.
2. Another member seconds the motion.
3. A member arises and addresses the Chair.
4. The vote is called for by the Chair.
5. The Chair recognizes the member who arose.
6. The Chair announces the result of the vote.
7. The member proposes a motion.
8. The assembly discusses the motion.

The correct order is: 3, 5, 7, 2, 1, 8, 4, 6, according to Parliamentary Procedure at a Glance by O. Garfield Jones.

GRAMMAR GUIDES

Lack of agreement between subject and verb sometimes is the result of carelessness. Frequently, the use of a singular subject with a plural verb or a plural subject with a singular verb is the result of uncertainty.

For example: The first two chapters of the book were exciting. The subject is chapters, not book. The chapters were . . .

Beware of singular subjects followed by such expressions as: with, together with, accompanied by, as well as . . . other things.

For example: The coach, as well as the players, (was, were) happy about the victory. In this case, the coach was happy. However: The coach and the players were happy about the victory.

What A Lousy Introduction

By WINSTON K. PENDLETON

When Willy came home after speaking before his Toastmasters club, his wife asked, "How did your speech go, honey?" "The speech went all right, but I would have done better if I had been given a decent send-off. Boy, what a lousy introduction!"

As soon as you accept a speaking engagement, send an introduction to the program chairman. This should be an introduction and not a biographical sketch.

The introduction should fit the audience. In addition, when you arrive to deliver your speech, always have an extra copy of your introduction in your pocket just in case the original was lost or the assigned program chairman couldn't attend.

This is a courtesy to the man who is to introduce you. It will guarantee you the kind of introduction you want and need for the proper development of your speech.

Here is a sample introduction that will give the speaker a proper acquaintance with his audience. It is brief and to the point:

"Our speaker today is Willy B. Bohring, vice-president and director of personnel for the Baker Brass and Bronze Ballast Company of Cleveland, Ohio. As personnel director, he administers all phases of relations between his company and more than 8,000 employees. This means interviewing, hiring, training, testing, motivating, and, if necessary, firing.

"Mr. Bohring is the author of several books about personnel matters, the latest being, Turning Personnel Problems into Management Opportunities. It was published by the McCrow Publishing Company.

"Mr. Bohring is in great demand as a speaker, and we are happy to welcome him here today. He is going to speak to us about 'How To Make Your Employees' Gripes Increase Your Profits.' Mr. Willy B. Bohring."

There are several points in this introduction that are worthy of attention. First, the name of the speaker is given in the opening sentence. The idea of holding back the speaker's name until the final dramatic moment is archaic. And rightfully so.

Name Him

It is silly not to give the speaker's name as you identify him with his accomplishments. When you mention his name only once, it sometimes becomes lost to the audience. The scraping of a single chair in the back of the room could easily blur the pronunciation of the speaker's name.

Everything said in this introduction points in one direction, the subject of the speech, personnel problems. Nothing is said that does not testify to the speaker's stature as a personnel expert.

Left out are all references to his lodge affiliations, his wife's maiden name, and the ages of his children. The introduction is direct. It builds up the speaker without wading through a lot of detracting and boring information.

When you furnish the chairman with a prepared introduction, you will find that he often will read it. There is nothing wrong with that. At least you know what he is going to say and that he will say it the way you want the audience to hear it.

The chairman might even say, "I am going to read the speaker's introduction exactly the way he sent it to me." Fine! That will give you an opportunity to say, "I want to thank the chairman for that gracious introduction. He was right. He read it exactly the way I wrote it. And that is good because . . ."

A Good Lead

You then can lead into any one of half a dozen side-splitting stories about other times you have been introduced. This is an ideal humor-developing sequence.

Note also that this introduction has a built-in point of flexibility where facts of specific interest can be inserted. This point of flexibility comes after the second paragraph. If you are a member of the organization to which you are speaking, this is the place to mention it.

For example, make this insert: "I am proud to say that our speaker is a fellow Toastmaster. He is a past president of so-and-so club in Ervine, Ohio."

If you are an engineer and are speaking to a group of engineers, it is appropriate to mention your educational background as far as it pertains to engineering. If you are speaking to a service club, your particular service club affiliation should be mentioned.

The main point to remember is this: the introduction is your responsibility.

The thoughtful preparations that have been described would have prevented the sort of fiasco I witnessed recently. The chairman obviously was inexperienced. His hand was shaking, and he probably was wishing that he were home watching television with his family.

He was making the introduction from some penciled notes he had jotted more than 10 minutes before. He looked at his scribbling and instead of introducing the speaker as the president of the alumni association, he said, "It is my pleasure to present to you the president of the Aluminum Company of America."

This experience probably caused the speaker to say to his wife when he arrived home, "The speech went all right, but what a lousy introduction."

TI Directors Conduct March Meeting

The board of directors of Toastmasters International conducted its spring meeting March 20-21 at World Headquarters in Santa Ana, Calif., to discuss many items of interest to Toastmasters around the world.

The International directors first met in various business committees — Executive Committee; Educational Committee; Organization, Planning, and Administrative Committee; Community Relations Committee; and District-Club Operations Committee — to study and review policies prior to the board meeting.

Actions of the board included the modification of a schedule for the board's study of district realignment. The World Headquarters staff was assigned to coordinate the study for the board.

Other board action included approval of a recommendation that speech content be given greater emphasis in the TI educational materials, and that additional materials about evaluation be prepared.

The directors reviewed educational programs to be presented at the June regional conferences and the 1970 International convention. Also reviewed were means of providing districts with the most up-to-date educational materials so that highest standard educational programs can be developed for district conferences.

Directors reviewed information relating to the conversion from the previous program manuals to TI's new communication and leadership program, and the board continued its review into revising the content and format of TI's monthly magazine, The Toastmaster.

Amendments Proposed

The board approved proposed amendments to the District Constitution and the Standard District Bylaws. The proposed amendments to the District Constitution will be voted upon by delegates at the convention's annual business meeting. All proposed amendments will be mailed to every club at least 60 days prior to the opening of the convention.

The directors approved tentative plans for the 1970 convention and reviewed various proposals for public relations activities.

Club Recognition

Also reviewed during the meeting was the Distinguished Club Plan, which will replace the Club Achievement Award Program in January, 1971.

Club officer terms were reviewed with no changes being made, and the 1970-71 Distinguished District Program was announced.

The board adopted a schedule of dates for the June regional conferences for 1971, 1972, 1973, and 1974. The schedule is:

REGION	1971	1972	1973	1974
I	11-12	16-17	29-30	7- 8
II	4- 5	9-10	22-23	28-29
III	11-12	16-17	29-30	7- 8
IV	25-26	2- 3	15-16	21-22
V	18-19	23-24	8- 9	14-15
VI	4- 5	9-10	22-23	28-29
VII	25-26	2- 3	15-16	21-22
VIII	18-19	23-24	8- 9	14-15

The next meeting of the Toastmasters International Board of Directors will be conducted August 8-9 in Portland, Ore., prior to the 1970 convention at the Portland Hilton Hotel.

You And Your 39th INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION

Educational programs for Toastmasters at your 39th International convention in Portland, Ore., August 10-13, are among the most up-to-date programs available to spark you in the development of your communication and leadership abilities.

Your 1970 convention is built around the theme "Success Is . . ." and the educational programs in the convention are aimed at lighting the pathways to approach your ideal of success.

Highlights of the convention's educational programs include presentation of the new TI Speechcraft program by Dr. Frank E. X. Dance of the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Dance is a member of TI's Educational Advisory Committee.

Another member of TI's Educational Advisory Committee, Dr. Alvin A. Goldberg of Northwestern University, will conduct a presentation dealing with interpersonal communication entitled "The Speaker — To One and Many."

Another entertaining and informative program will be an audience participation presentation by David L. Schmidt. The program, "Nonverbal Communication" deals with effective reading both for speed and accuracy.

Dr. Dance has been a member of TI's Educational Advisory Committee since 1968. He is professor of communication and director of the Speech Communication Center at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee.

Publications by Dr. Dance have dealt with areas of human communication and adult speech communication. In addition to numerous articles, Dr. Dance is the author of three books, the latest of which is Human Communication Theory, published in 1967.

Dr. Alvin A. Goldberg is a professor of public address and group communication, and he is director of the Communication Research Laboratory of the School of Speech at Northwestern University.

Dr. Goldberg has been an instructor at the University of Hawaii, an assistant professor at Northern Illinois University, and a professor and director of graduate studies at the University of Denver.

David L. Schmidt, senior consultant for the management consulting firm of Lawrence-Leiter Co., specializes in management development, with emphasis in communication training, executive recruiting, and management organization.

Plan your vacation around the 39th International convention in Portland, Ore., August 10-13, and fly you and your family to the islands of Hawaii on the Toastmasters post-convention tour to the Pacific paradise.

Toastmasters International has arranged with Churchill Tours, Inc., in Portland to provide you with three itineraries, so you and your family can tour the areas of Hawaii you most want to see — at special tour rates that are available only to Toastmasters and their families.

Join your fellow Toastmasters and their families after the International convention as they board a jet airliner August 14 for Honolulu.

After a short time, your aircraft begins a gradual descent. Diamond Head appears beyond the wingtips followed by the gleaming stretches of Waikiki Beach.

The three itineraries of the post-convention tour offer you a wide variety of sightseeing.

The first itinerary is a seven-day, six-night visit to Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, with accommodations at the new and luxurious Waikiki Holiday Inn. Cost: $298 per person.

Here is Honolulu, capital of Polynesia, the wonderful whirl of Waikiki, and a delightful place to spend your dream vacation.

The second itinerary is a six-day, five-night extension of the first itinerary. It is a tour to the outer islands: Kauai, Maui, and Hawaii. Cost: $208 per person. This is your opportunity to become more familiar with the islands.

The third itinerary combines three exciting days in Honolulu and visits to the outer islands of Kauai and Maui. This is a seven-day, six-night combination of the first and second itineraries, except for the visit to the island of Hawaii. Cost: $395 per person.

An Invitation To You...

Mr. Toastmaster

World Headquarters wants to share your success with other Toastmasters and with men who not yet are Toastmasters. WHQ receives many requests for material that tells about the success of our members, and we'd like to answer these requests by telling your success story! Of course, we would ask your permission before using your name.

Take a few moments now and reflect upon what your goals were when you joined Toastmasters. Think about how the Toastmasters Communication and Leadership Program and your club's standard of excellence has accelerated your pace toward accomplishing these goals.

Now take a few more minutes and tell us (in not more than two pages) how your communication and leadership development has helped you obtain greater recognition in your occupation.

Tell us how the Toastmasters communication and leadership program has helped you in your:

- Occupational advancement. Include your company's name and your job titles.
- List any elective or appointive offices you have occupied in professional, civic, service, fraternal, and other organizations because of your Toastmasters experience. List the dates you occupied these offices.
- List other activities in which your Toastmasters experience has aided your participation.
- Comment about how you have benefited in general from your Toastmasters experience.
- Include your name and address, your club name and number, and your district number.

TOASTMASTERS TOWN OF THE MONTH—NEW LONDON, CONN.

NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT, once was the second largest whaling port in the United States and famous as a ship-building center. Today, the riverfront still bustles with the activity of submarine and other naval craft, fishing boats, ferries, tankers, and thousands of pleasure boats.

New London was founded in 1646 by John Winthrop, son of the leader of the historic Great (Puritan) Migration. The first settlers wanted to call their city London after their homeland metropolis, but the General Court of England opposed it. In 1647, the Massachusetts Legislature proclaimed the settlement to be called New London.

Within the past 50 years the New London area has become important as a center for naval and coast guard training programs. It is the base of the U.S. nuclear submarine fleet and the home of the U.S. Coast Guard Academy.

In the tradition of a boat-building center, New London is the site of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp., which has produced many nuclear submarines for the U.S. Navy.

This 300-year-old city is the home of New London Club 1782-53, which celebrates its 15th anniversary this month. There also is Dolphin Club 2711-53 at the New London Submarine Base.

Each year, during May, the mayor of New London proclaims a special Toastmasters Week in the community. This year the mayor will be made an honorary member of New London Club 1782-53.

Also at this time each year, Toastmasters of New London Club are interviewed on radio station WNLC to discuss the Toastmasters program.

Feed Him, He's Hungry

By JAN P. KLIPPERT

How many men leave your club hungry? I don't mean the quality or quantity of their meal. I mean the standard of excellence your club provides experienced Toastmasters.

Do they leave the Toastmasters table satisfied, or do they leave unchallenged? There are a number of reasons for leaving a club: "I'm tired," "I'm not interested any more," or "I have new responsibilities."

These and others may be true, in part, but not entirely true. Challenge your experienced Toastmasters! They won't leave if you maintain their excitement.

They won't leave if your educational vice-president gives each member an opportunity to participate in TI's Member Program Planning Guide (403). With the information from this member-needs survey, your educational committee can provide club programming to help your experienced Toastmasters in the further development of their communication and leadership abilities—their original reason for joining a Toastmasters club.

The experienced Toastmaster frequently is saddled with the role of counselor, the club's mentor. He is the man who is given the "hot potato" because "we know he will do a good job." Sometimes he becomes nothing more than an example to be displayed for visitors and new-member prospects.

In most clubs, a man who has been active for more than two years falls into the "experienced member" category. He likely has occupied club offices and is looked upon as potential area or district officer material.

Challenge Him

Present him with a challenge. In club programming he must be looked upon as experienced. By virtue of that experience, he must be given challenges to meet his experience.

Similarly, the evaluation of an experienced Toastmaster's speech is critical. It should be more firm than the evaluation provided for a less experienced member. Test the experienced Toastmaster's logic, check his content and organization. Was he challenging? Did he challenge the evaluator's ability?

The experienced Toastmaster can use the longer time limit to prepare a major talk that will open doors for his audience. This also can be your opportunity to learn.

Here is a challenge yet untapped. We can talk about salesmanship, for example, in a disassociated way. But, if the approach is personalized — if he selects his words, avoids generalities, and projects his life's enthusiasm to his audience — we truly have a great resource.

Challenge him to talk about topics which require him to present his philosophic approach to correcting a social wrong. We are confronted with social ills every day, whether they be in the form of high taxes, alleged mis-doings in government, crime, or drug abuse.

If he is not challenged in this assignment, he never will be. He must define his position and develop a program of specific action. He will be out of his field, but this is part of the challenge.

Evaluate Him

Depending on his experience, his talk should be evaluated from the point of view of its treatment. Did he talk in glowing generalities lifted from the daily newspaper?

Was the content of his talk an echo, or were his listeners satisfied that he shared his insights and background with them?

Words and ideas provide another fertile source for speech topics. Challenge him to discuss leadership or courage. Suggest he compare "youth and energy" with "maturity and experience."

You can see the results. The hunger for challenge will be satisfied, and the experienced Toastmaster and the club members will participate in the feast.

Another aspect of producing challenge is to offer variety. Program variety is part of the key to keeping the experienced Toastmaster challenged and keeping you interested!

Debates, public discussions, and opportunities to promote a cause through your club's speakers bureau abound with potential and variety for your club programming. Encourage your experienced men to attempt new things, discover a new field, and take time to investigate a new topic.

New Techniques

Open the challenge to use new techniques and speak before new audiences. Slides, charts and graphs, tape recordings, and other audiovisual materials meet this need. Community groups and other clubs offer audience variety.

The value of exploring unfamiliar areas in our club programs is what sets the Toastmasters experience apart from other organizations. If your club misses this chance, it is missed forever.

Ask your experienced Toastmaster to be an "advisor" or "coach" to the new members.

This is a stimulating, exciting Toastmasters experience.

If they aren't encouraged to practice using the unfamiliar, they will remain hungry, and they will not be satisfied at the banquet. Encourage flexibility in programming. Be flexible in topics and support the man who attacks the unfamiliar.

Don't Overload

But take care not to overload him. Often we find the experienced Toastmaster has had his round of club offices. During his officership, he has had a variety of administrative and organizational duties, all of which required time-consuming follow-through. He might discover that, while serving as an officer, he has neglected many speech fundamentals.

He might need to "fall back and re-group." Let him rest! The experienced Toastmaster might need to refresh himself and his abilities.

It is necessary to estimate what his forte is, but we find the primary purpose for joining Toastmasters is to develop and improve one's communication and leadership abilities and to be prepared to keep on the move.

The scope is wide, yet the opportunities for such expression in some clubs have become limited. Open the gates and let flow the vast varieties and forms of expression.

Club leadership must realize that within our daily pursuits each of us presses toward a goal which is limited in scope. The Toastmasters standard of excellence in club programming provides broadening horizons and many viewpoints. It is a sharing ground for things in this world.

If he wasn't hungry, he wouldn't be at the Toastmasters table. The challenges of this smorgasbord must not be overlooked. Some dishes will be sampled while others will be savored and enjoyed.

In your club programming, no member should leave the table hungry. If there is no provision to satiate the man who requires a challenge, he will leave. The hunger pangs will remain, but he no longer participates in the Toastmasters' banquet.

Both orders include a gift presentation box.

12k gold-filled Cross Pen (6602) $8.50 each

12k gold-filled Cross Pen and Pencil Set (6601) $17.00 per set

Add $1.00 per item (or set) ordered for packing and shipping costs. Orders from California add 5% sales tax.
